

“Make your education valuable. Apply what you learnt. Refuse to take the back seat and watch things happen. Join the change and be part of the change.” – I. Ayivor

3x 1,5h meetings

- in small teams (a 5 students)
- guided and supported with a lecturer
- interdisciplinary focus
- on the basis of some theoretical input

Participants: Bachelor, Master, PhD students

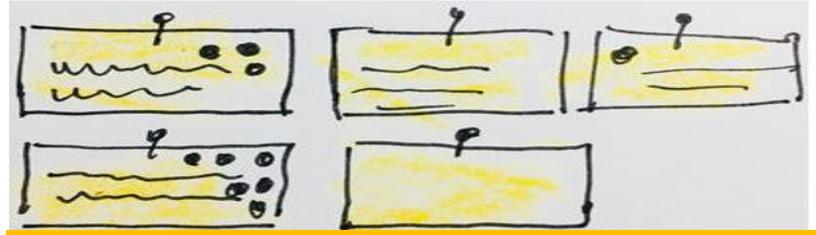

2. Develop ideas

Role of academics in society?

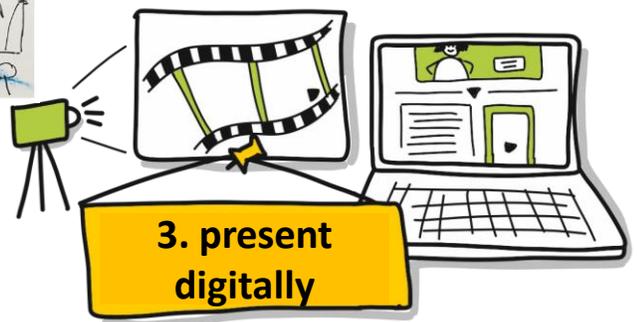

- How can young academics contribute to change in society?
- What could be small scale community projects were we could make a difference?

scientist, architects, economists, educationists, ..

1. Explore and learn about the problem

Online-conference

3. present digitally

Public event: Open to a larger audience of students

Let's reflect on the employment-crisis in Iraq

1. Mapping the crisis situation (status, core concepts, historical & global perspective)
2. Scenarios for the future (core concepts: interplay education, economy & democracy)
3. Bottom-up/ grass-root approaches and their potential

Expert talks

“Make your education valuable. Apply what you learnt. Refuse to take the back seat and watch things happen. Join the change and be part of the change.” – I. Ayivor

Let's reflect on employment crisis in Iraq – Online-Conference

Iraq, like other countries, is experiencing a deep economic and political crisis. There is great challenges, especially for young people, to enter the job market and build a career. Many young people are protesting or decide to migrate to other countries in the hope for better opportunities abroad.

In this situation, big hope and expectations are resting on university students. As academics with specialized knowledge and abilities, university graduates may have the potential to serve as leaders to guide Iraq to a better future. In our Online event, based on scientific ideas we would like to:

- Reflect on the nature of the ongoing crisis situation
- Discuss possible future developments
- Learn about concepts for taking action
- Develop and present your own project ideas

Please apply under: <https://resi.tu-dortmund.de/conference> (open after 20.04.2021)

