graduates in the field of philosophy by equipping them with a strong command of its academic subjects and critical thinking skills across its various disciplines. Additionally, it seeks to enhance their scientific research capabilities in philosophical sciences, encourage them to conduct research relevant to community programs, and support studies with future-oriented and practical (applied) perspectives. This fosters active participation in serving society through direct and continuous engagement with institutions, providing expert consultations, and strengthening continuing education programs to supply both governmental and non-governmental organizations with qualified specialists in the field.
