An overview of the human rights law branch

The Human Rights Law Branch was established in 2012, and there is no similar branch in the corresponding colleges. Thus, the College of Law at the University of Mosul is the only college in which this specialization is available. This branch was started at the beginning of the academic year (2012-2013), and the branch includes specializations. (International law, international humanitarian law, human (rights

- The branch awards a master's degree and a higher diploma in the field of human rights
- The branch has many scientific, cultural, and community service activities, both actual and virtual, as the branch held many scientific seminars, workshops, dozens of discussion circles, and many initiatives in community service
