Graduates' outcomes:

1.Knowledge of the concepts of democracy and human rights

2. Acquiring the values of citizenship and ensuring the exercise of one's electoral rights

3. Ability to use information technology (IT).

4. Working in the spirit of professional ethics

5. Acquire basic concepts in physics and be able to apply physics in the medical and industrial fields and serve the community through their work in scientific, practical, and research institutions that support this direction.

6. Demonstrate a good basic knowledge of structural and functional aspects of physical systems at many spatial scales, from the single molecule to the entire system.