

Seminar: Economic cooperation in urban and regional development

Open to all faculties.

To develop sufficient models of economic cooperation is crucial for building a strong economy and hence a stable society. In this intensive seminar we will discuss economic relations of different actors in urban and regional development from an interdisciplinary perspective. With Scholars at TU Dortmund University from different faculties, we will discuss several approaches to urban and regional cooperation and what role economics plays in this regard. Additionally there will be a conjoint workshop on higher education didactics, providing you with knowledge about contemporary approaches on adult education, included in the programme. Colleagues from Mosul University, who attend, are kindly asked to prepare a Poster to present an example of their research to TU Dortmund students and staff in english language.
